

White House Daily Briefing
November 6, 2018

Three Articles to Read

Trump is right on the national security threat from caravans

A growing caravan from Central America is making its way to our border, and a second is following in its footsteps. The first wave of invaders marches proudly under the flag of Honduras, a nation many of them ostensibly find so abhorrent that they are willing to walk the entire length of Mexico to escape it. Meanwhile, their supporters defiantly burned an American flag outside the United States embassy in Honduras.

<https://thehill.com/opinion/immigration/415027-trump-is-right-on-the-national-security-threat-from-caravans>

Two years in, Trump holds stock market bragging rights

U.S. President Donald Trump has taken credit for the stock market's gains during his nearly two years in the White House, and those claims are reasonable given the impact of tax cuts and pro-business policies on investor sentiment. <https://www.reuters.com/article/us-usa-election-stocks/two-years-in-trump-holds-stock-market-bragging-rights-idUSKCN1NB0GY>

How Trump's helped people with pre-existing conditions and major health issues

Democrats have tried to make Tuesday's elections about health care. As with most issues, they equate government spending with success — liberals claim they care more than conservatives because they spend more of other people's hard-earned money.

<https://nypost.com/2018/11/04/how-trumps-helped-people-with-pre-existing-conditions-and-major-health-issues/>

Things to Know

When the facts are on your side

- Six hundred and fifty-four days into the Trump Administration, Americans no longer have to wonder what President Donald J. Trump will do for our country. The results speak louder than any words could.
- Take the economy. In 2016, liberals such as New York Times columnist Paul Krugman confidently predicted the Trump Presidency would produce a “global recession, with no end in sight.” Now? The boom for American workers is so historic that former President

Obama wants credit, arguing the 2018 Trump Economy is really the Obama Economy. Talk about a turnaround.

- Friday's jobs report marked yet another milestone:
 - The economy has added 4.5 million jobs since Election Day 2016.
 - America's 3.7 percent unemployment rate is the lowest since 1969.
 - Consumer confidence in October surged to an 18-year high.
 - Weekly jobless claims are at their lowest in more than 45 years.
- That wasn't even the best news. On the heels of Friday's report, "the bigger story may be wage growth," which had been the missing piece of the sluggish post-recession "recovery" under President Obama. Last month, American workers saw their largest year-over-year pay increase in nearly a decade.
- See how the Trump Economy defied the odds—again—and created 250,000 jobs last month alone.
- Watch and share: The U.S. economy is on fire!
- The Trump Economy in your backyard
- President Trump continues his busy travel schedule yesterday, visiting Ohio, Indiana, and Missouri. In the past few days, the President has also traveled to West Virginia, Florida, Montana, Georgia, and Tennessee.
- Each of these states contributes something unique to our country, but they share one important thing in common—the Trump Economy is delivering for workers and their families in every single one. For example:
 - In Ohio, real median household income is the highest since 2000.
 - In Missouri, the unemployment rate hit 3.2 percent—its lowest since 2000.
 - In Indiana, median income leapt to its highest level since 1999.
- The Trump Economy is booming from coast to coast!